AFRICAN CULTURE

AFRICA Today

Africa, the second largest continent is the scene of great political and social revolution. As recently as 1950, only four African countries were independent. But strong national movements during the 1960's resulted in the end of most European colonies which became independent states.

Many of the African countries have rich natural resources which should help them thoroughly. The mines of Africa produce almost all of the world's supply of diamonds, copper, gold, manganese, and uranium; there are also important deposits of coal, iron, and petroleum and potentially great sources of hydro-electric power.

Africa grows much of the world's supply of cacao, palm oil and palm kernels, peanuts, and sisal. The forests have valuable hardwood such as ebony and mahogany.

Less than a hundred years ago, Africa was called the Dark Continent, partly because much of it had not been explored. Traders and European businessmen, looking for natural wealth, pushing further inland trying to meet the ever growing demands of the European market. Mining towns and trading centers grew into full-size cities. While much of Africa was urbanized, there were certain natural barriers, desert and jungle, which defied habitation.

With the coming of better transportation more and more people travel to Africa each year. Some make trips on the longest river in the world which is the Nile River, or the world's largest desert, the Sahara. Africa with its natural and human potential should look forward to a prosperous future.

The People

It is difficult to categorize the people in Africa. All possess different characteristics and methods.

Most people of tropical Africa possess these characteristics: dark skin and light bone structure. However, Africa is really a great melting pot, and skin color ranges from almost white to blue-black.

West Africa is the home of the Bantu Africans who predominate the lower part of the continent. Their skin is lighter and they are generally smaller than the West Africans.

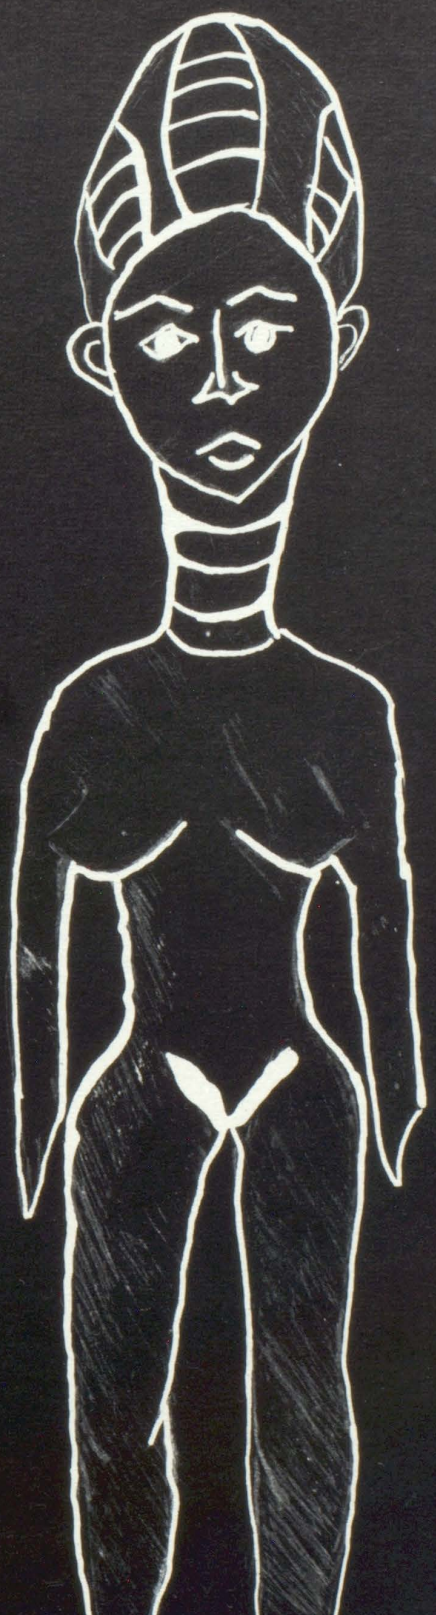

There are about 100,000 Pygmies. They average about four feet six inches in height, and weigh about eighty-eight pounds. Their skin is yellowish brown. The Pygmies are found mainly in the tropical forests of the upper Congo Basin. They live as hunters and foragers.

Africa also has giants. Some of the Nilotic people of the Watutsi Tribe stand seven feet tall. They have thin lips, narrow noses, and long heads. The Watutsi Tribe, whose towering warriors dance with spears and feathered headdresses, are Nilotes.

About 750,000 Europeans live in Tropical Africa. Rhodesia has the largest European population, and whites control the government of that country.

There are about 400,000 Asians in the tropical part of Africa, mainly on the east coast. Many of these migrated from India, Pakistan, and the Arab nations.

The Land

Many Americans still think of Tropical Africa as one vast jungle extending from the Atlantic Coast to the Indian Ocean. We tend to think that all of the people in this region share the same climate, live in the same manner, and face the same problems.

In order to understand the problems of the new nations, one must know more about the land and climate that counts so much in Africa.

Tropical Africa – The region between the Tropic of Cancer and Tropic of Capricorn which covers about 8½ million square miles in Tropical Africa. It is about twice the size of the United States. It includes the island of Madagascar (now the Malagasy Republic) off the east coast of Africa.

Only about six percent of all Africa is covered by thick forest, where the rainfall is one hundred inches or more per year. It is found mostly along the coast of West Africa and in the Congo River Basin.

As you go inland from the west coast, the forest gradually thins out and becomes the Savanna. The Savanna lies in two regions, each about six hundred miles wide. They are north and south of the jungle. In these belts, there are wooded plains, grassy lands with trees and fields where some grass grows. The Savannas are the farm and cattle zones of the continent. In South Africa they are called the Veld and in the North, they are called the Sudan.

Beyond the Savannas are the deserts. The Sahara, the largest in the world, takes up about one fourth of the land surface of the continent. It extends from the Atlantic Ocean east to the Red Sea. These are Africa's major types of lands.

Ways Of Life

Tribal Life

A tribe is a group of people who have cultural and political unity. Each has its own customs and way of life. Most consist of several families. One family is usually the ruling group. The oldest member of that family may be the chief of the tribe, although some are ruled by a group of elders.

Some tribes are the size of nations, while others are small village communities. Most permit polygamy which means that men who can afford to, will have several wives. In tribal life the individual identifies his welfare with welfare of the group. Most Africans are trained from childhood to share things with other members of the tribe.

Tribalism slows economic progress in the new nations of Africa. Tribal culture, which is cooperative, does not encourage individual initiative nor the longing for material goods.

Life In Cities

Even when Africans move from their homeland to cities, they seldom forget tribal ties. They keep many tribal practices and most of them return frequently to their homelands.

Only about forty percent of the people in Africa live in cities. The educated minority of adult Africans usually hold government positions or work in industry. Many of the members of this educated elite were trained in missionary schools. Many have attended colleges in Europe and the United States. Most of the leader of the new nations south of the Sahara, recognize that social change requires emphasis on education. Some governments are spending up to thirty percent of their money on education. A shortage of teachers is a major problem in Africa. The United States Peace Corps volunteers are helping to meet this inadequacy in some countries.

Farming

Over seventy-five percent of African people are engaged in subsistence; that is, they produce what they need for their family and often have little or nothing extra to sell for income.

In the rain forest regions of western and central Africa, the typical farm and garden staples are: yams, cassava, bananas and manioc. All of these foods are high in carbohydrates which provide available starch base for the African diet.

In the great savannah areas, grains – chiefly millet and corn are cultivated.

In the plateau of eastern, central, and southern Africa corn is the major grain.

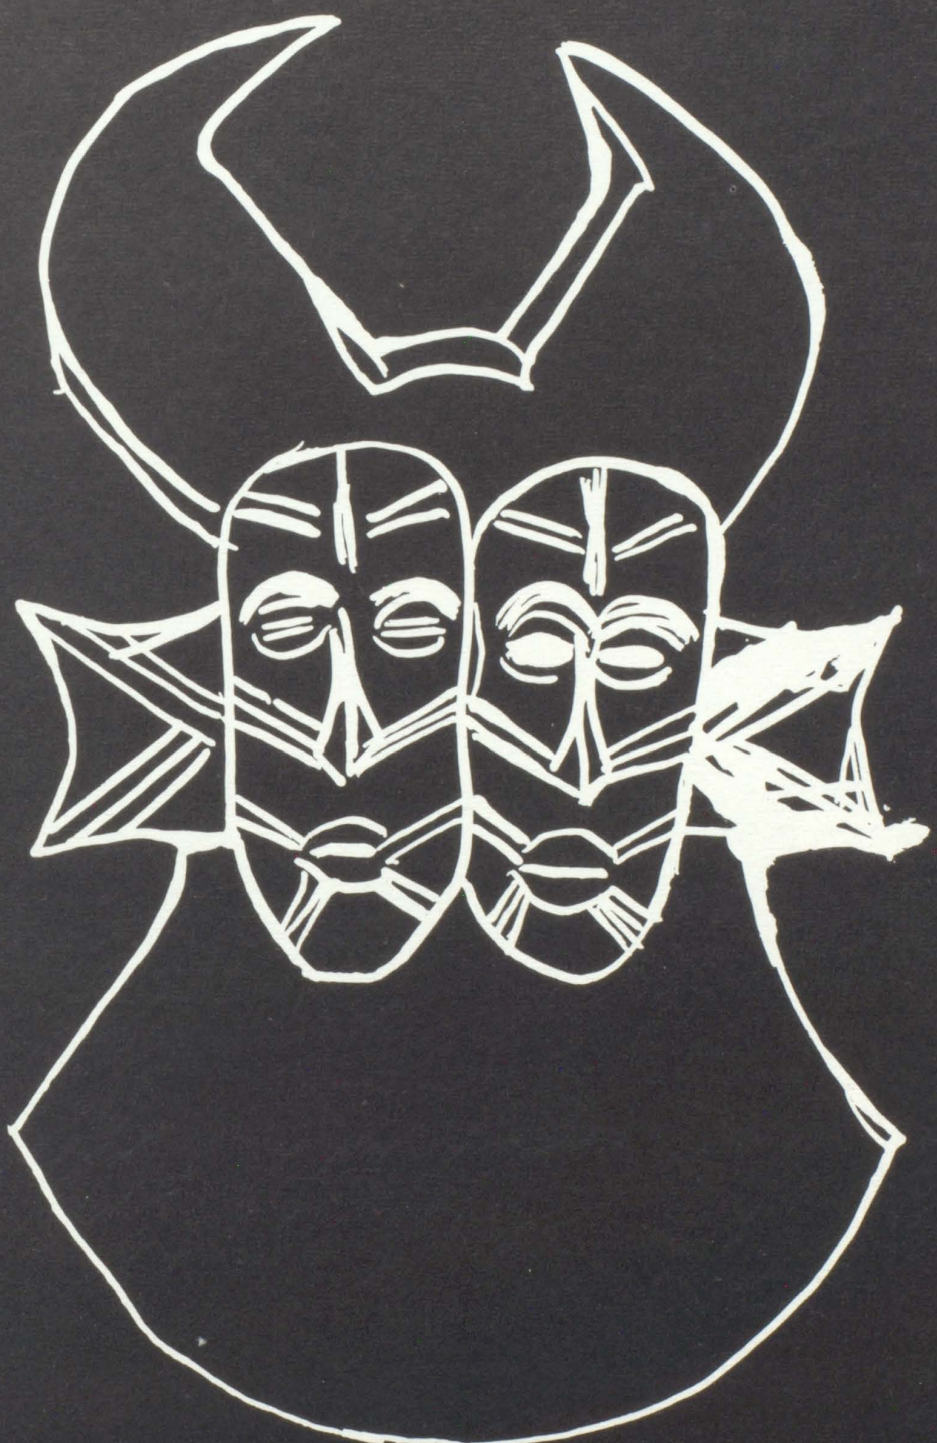

The coastal areas of the African continent produce a variety of tropical fruits: bananas, citrus fruits, mangoes, pineapples, and avocados.

The Tsetse fly has prevented cattle raising in much of Africa. In most areas where cattle are kept, the grasses are not of a quality to make them fat enough for export. Africa has roughly about twelve percent of the world's cattle.

Africa does produce a major share of the worlds supply of some agricultural commodities. Nearly the entire world's supply of vanilla and cloves comes from Africa, as do over seventy-five percent of the sisal.

If African farmers are to achieve higher yields, it will be necessary to apply the best scientific and technological knowledge available. Irrigation is needed as well as better fertilizers.

Crop researchers must find better, hardier plants that will thrive and bring high yields under African growing conditions. Small farmers must learn to abandon their old technique when better ones are found.

The Languages

The language barriers are more significant than the racial differences in Africa. Although educated Africans may speak English French or Portuguese, most of the people speak only the language of their tribe.

There are more than 800 local languages and dialects in Africa. A tribe may speak an entirely different language than another living just a mile away.

The boundaries of the countries usually ignore tribal grouping. They follow the lines laid out by colonial administrators, who paid little attention to tribal differences.

The Afro-Asiatic group which includes the Semitic languages (Hebrew, Arabic, Amharic) and the Hamitic languages (Berber, Cuslite, and ancient Egyptian), is one of the four divisions. Speakers of these languages are mainly Caucasoid in radical type.

Nilo-Saharan is the language of the Sudan and upper regions of the Nile. It is called the Nilo-Saharan so as to include related languages native to some of the desert nomads and farmers on the desert's fringe. The people who speak in this language are of mixed racial backgrounds.

The Khoisan language is also commonly called the click languages because that's what they are – all a bristle with consonants not so much voiced as expelled, rather like the sounds of reproof we make with our tongues and write as "tsk, tsk." The Khoisan languages are largely monopolized by Bushmen and Hottentots of South-west Africa and by remnant bands of eastern relatives, whose presence demonstrates the extent of old home-lands.

The Congo language is the largest language division; it covers a vast geographical territory. One can hear it spoken throughout the heart-land of Africa which stretches from the Niger to the Congo.

As a result, the Africans find it difficult to think in terms of "nations." Tribal loyalties are often stronger than the sense of nationality.

Clothing – Dress

The hotter and wetter the climate of their homeland, the fewer the clothes the Africans wear. Tribes in the jungles of the interior wear very little. But in North Africa, the nomads of the desert protect themselves against the hot sun by wearing loose cotton robes.

The Africans generally wear clothes made of whatever materials are available, such as grasses or animal skins. Most African tribes have a strong love of color and ornament. Since they wear few clothes, some tattoo their skins, paint themselves with clay, and hang ornaments on their bodies.

In South Africa, the white population wears light clothing of the usual European type. The Bantus are also adopting this style.

Art

Perhaps Africa's greatest contribution to the world is its vast body of masterful art. Most of the ancient works of Africa have religious significance. Wood carving of human figures are supposed to represent living spirits. Many tribes still carve striking and colorful masks to be worn during religious ceremonies. The empires of the Kongo and the Kuba, the Luba and Lunda were responsible for a tremendous development in arts and crafts, particularly music and sculpture.

African kings were patrons of art and as a result, you find some magnificent carving in ivory and wood. Also fine metal work in bronze, gold and iron go back as far as the sixteenth century or further.

Sculpture

African sculpture consists of figures, masks, and other decorated ceremonial and useful objects. Because most African sculptures were made in perishable materials such as wood, few of these works are more than 100 or 200 years old. However, works in bronze and ivory and terra-cotta date back several centuries. The oldest known African sculptures are terra-cotta figures created about 500 B.C. in the Nok culture of Nigeria.

Figures and masks are found mainly in the western and central parts of Africa. Many figures represent ancestors – either the recently dead or the mythical tribal founders who watch over the well-being of the tribe. Despite its remarkable variations, African sculpture reveals a few recurring characteristics. Many of its forms have an expressive rhythm because the same shapes are repeated over and over again.

In recent years, African Art has won world-wide appreciation. The abstract form of expression employed by African artists has had a major influence on Modern Art in the West.

Modern Africa

Africa faces the future with high hopes. Its hopes are more attuned to reality now than they were at the start of independence. Few people in Africa expect miracles overnight.

The rest of the world needs to acquire the more realistic views of Africa that Africa itself has developed. Governments have changed suddenly in this great continent – and they will change even more in the coming years. In the next few years, Africa may not be peaceful and sedate, and orderly, but, it will not fall apart or sever. The tensions and the instabilities are signs of progress and it means that the continent is alive and in the process of dynamic change. Its people are on the march and they are throwing off centuries of isolation. They are hungry for progress and for a place in an exciting world.

No one can predict the future, but the signs for Africa are favorable. The people are alert and eager and they possess a great native ability in terms of creative ideas. With the substantial resources that are accessible and the able leaders who are learning rapidly, Africa is assured of a productive and shining future.

JEANNETTE ALLEN WILLIAMS
Principal

In West Side High School, we have attempted to provide an atmosphere in which you, the Class of 1971, could grow intellectually, physically, morally and socially. It is our hope that you have developed fundamental skills to prepare you for making a living; we trust that we have instilled in you, basic ethical values to equip you for making a life.

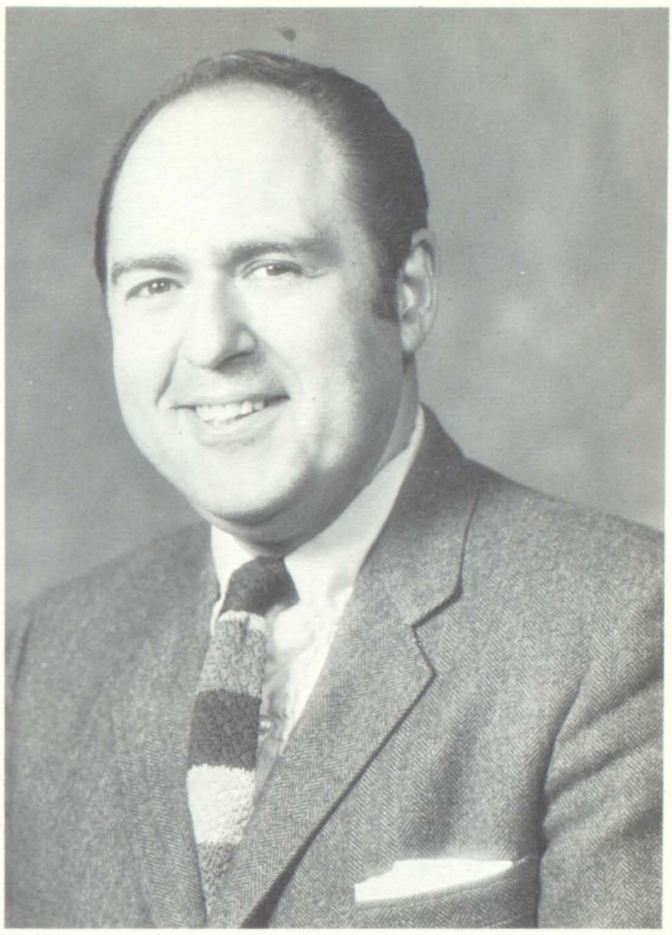

During your school years, you have experienced personal problems as well as those of this nation and this century. Parents, counselors, teachers, administrators and others have helped you cope with this complex world. It is our hope that through our guidance, you have learned to adjust to life, to overcome obstacles, to make wise decisions and to be of benefit to yourselves and others.

Farewell to the Class of 1971.

GUIDANCE

Throughout our years at West Side, the guidance department has spearheaded our academic activities and relations with other institutions with unquestioning zeal.

Our senior counselors, Mr. Fetten and Mr. Martin and our College counselor, Mrs. Kaplan have done fine work in acquainting us with opportunities that await us and advice that was needed.

I have especially warm feelings toward the graduating Class of 1971, since we came here together in the Fall of 1967. I've watched you grow and am somewhat saddened as you finally approach this new hurdle in your life.

Being your advisor has been a rewarding experience for me. In fact, you have given me the most enjoyable year of my life. All of you have been most cooperative and considerate.

May you have the best in all of your endeavors. God bless all of you. Remember me always.

Remember When . . .

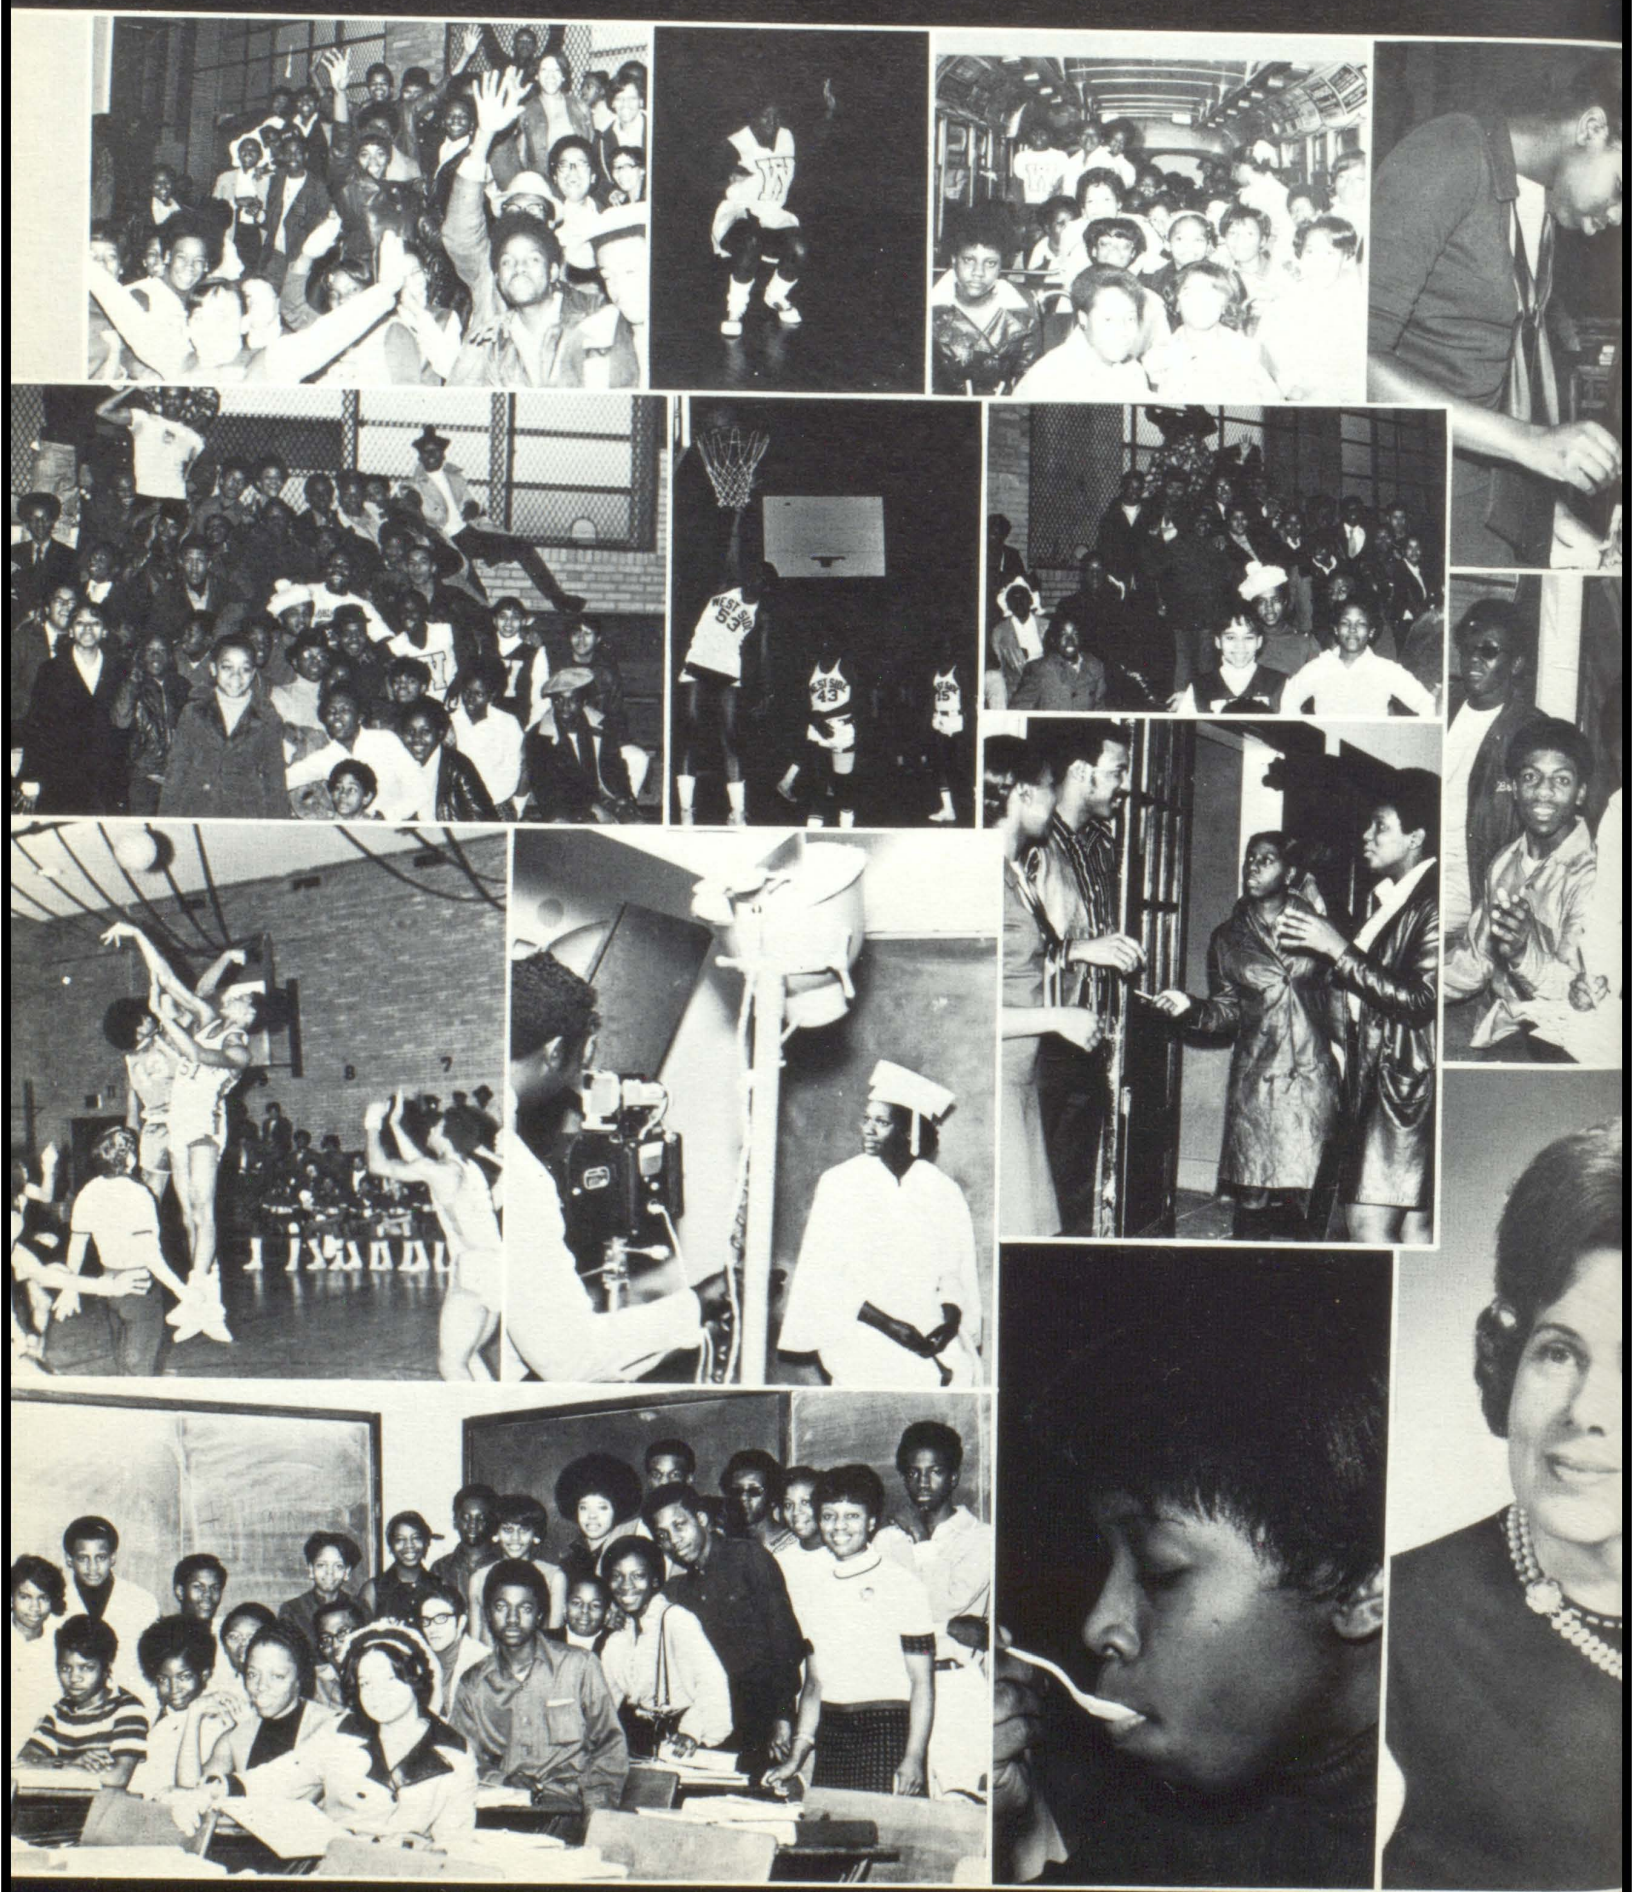

The football team won the Hoboken game which was televised.
The Basketball team lost the "very first game"!
West Side had a lot of bomb scares.
Brenda Henderson and Joyce Riddick gave their jamming party.
Cynthia Kirkland got a "B" in English!
Ricardo Moore went to all his classes!
Stanley Griffin cut English!!
Lestine Pleasant made that bad split on stage.
Val White and Sherry Jones made those together hook shots in Girl's Basketball.
Mr. F. Martin wanted to grow a full Afro!
Mr. J. Martin didn't suspend anyone for a whole week.
The cafeteria had "GOOD" food!!!
We took those "mug shots" which were supposed to be pictures on I.D. cards.
Lois Littles was the center attraction at the "Orange" football game.

FOOTBALL

When these signals are called, West Side's men go into action. The swift movements of the bodies of these men are unbelievable. The team, headed by Coach Mistretta with the competent aid of Captain Eugene Fleming, is one of the best teams West Side has ever had, especially in the area of spirit and enthusiasm.

Although the team wasn't number one in the league, it certainly was NUMBER ONE at West Side.

TEAM

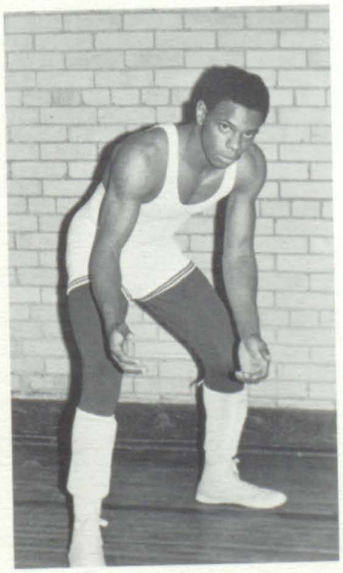

WRESTLING

The wrestling team this year has done quite a tremendous job. Our record was (11-1). The most outstanding wrestlers were Bruce Jackson (12-0), Euwanta Fleming (12-0), and Thomas Frazier (12-0).

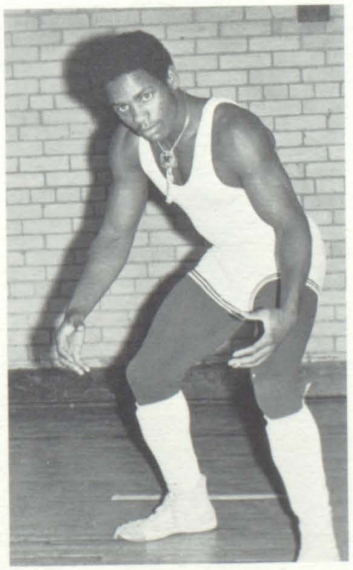

During the Rahway Game they were losing 17-3, then they made a brilliant comeback. They defeated them 23-17.

Our wrestlers, wrestled us on to victory.

West Side's Cross Country Team came in third place in the city of Newark. This could not have been achieved without the help of our outstanding runners. Just to mention the senior runners. Dorian Douglas, Stanley Adams, Clavin Singelton, and Kerman Gray.

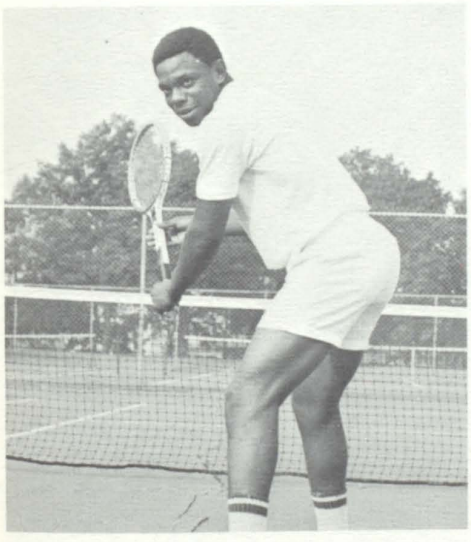

Tennis

Dorian Douglas

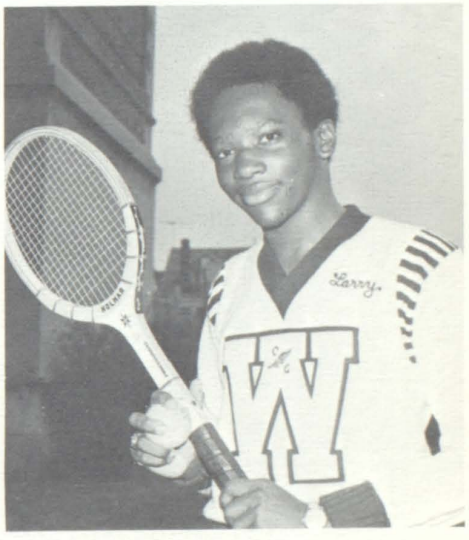

James Walters

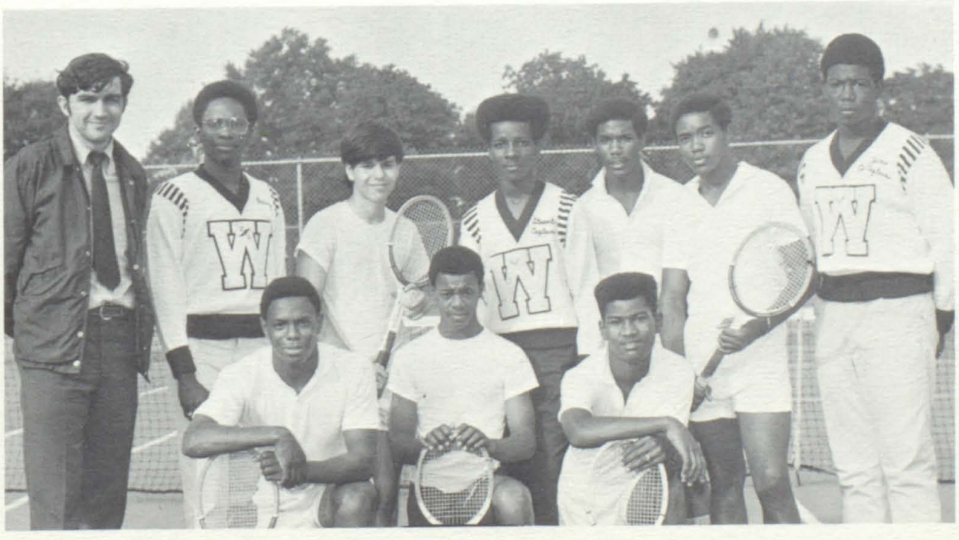

Thomas Frazier

Stewart King

Larry Motley

West Side's Tennis Team is one of West Side's most recent teams. The team lived up to all its expectations of being rough all the way.

The outstanding players are Captain, Stewart King, Co-Captain, James Walters, Dorian Douglas, Thomas Frazier, and Larry Motley.

Our West Side Twirlers beautify the field with their bright uniforms, precision strutting, and radiant smiles. These girls practice religiously and every Saturday during the football season, they display routines that you have never seen.

While our Alma Mater is being chanted, the twirlers hold their heads high as if to say,

Were from West Side
We don't come any prouder
And if you can't hear us
We'll yell a little louder.

CHEER

"T-E-A-M — yay team"

That's what you hear wherever West Side's teams are playing. Whether we win or whether we lose, they are showing school spirit and shouting to stimulate emotion. Behind each Rough Rider, there's a Rough Riderette who is proud to say, "We've got a team to shout about!"

To the Senior Class of 1971

It is my sincere hope that you will be in the vanguard of those youth who will become involved in the world of today and the world of tomorrow. The total society thirsts for creativity and innovative, constructive revitalization of staid institutions and traditions.

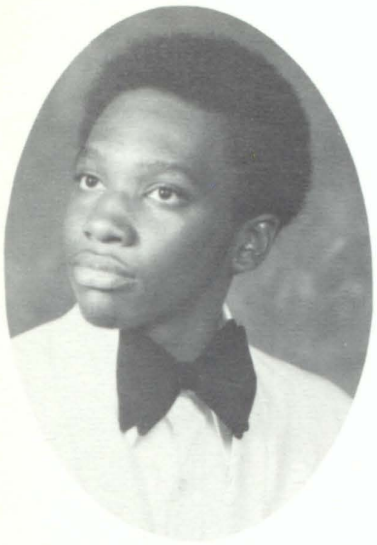

If I may borrow a phrase from the late black educator, Mary McLeod Bethune, a bulwark in the educational field:

"It is better to be prepared and not asked, than to be asked, and not prepared."

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

We the graduating class of June 1971, being of sound minds and of happy hearts, do hereby declare this our Last Will and Testament wherein we leave to:

Mrs. Williams: A year's supply of woolite for her wash and wear _____!

Mr. Fred Martin: A bottle of hair growing tonic.

Mr. Hunt: Three years supplies of mod ties so he will continue to look smooth and sharp.

Mrs. Dozier: A pair of padded stockings.

Mrs. Cato: All the business of the girls to pry in.

Miss Wall: A book about "Sex"

Mrs. Castellero: A drama class

Mr. Swanson: A new pair of pants.

Mrs. Smith: A supply of Pep pills.

Mr. Sista: Some jobs.

Mrs. Shampansky: A Black Panther paper.

Mrs. Franzblau: Her geraniums.

Mr. L. Friedman: The hard Chemistry tests.

Mr. Luciano: A girls' Personal Adjustment class

Mr. Showell: A book on "How to Play Basketball"

Mr. McNeil: A smile

Mr. Prag: All the "A" test papers.

Mr. Rocco & Mr. Elia: Our experiments.

Mr. Paige: A G—R—LE.

The Cafeteria Cooks: A new recipe book.

Delphine Harris leaves Willa all the parties at W.S.H.S.

Barbara Whitaker leaves Jackie Moses all the great opportunities that life offer.

Dennie McCrae leaves Brenda Duncan all his love, for now anyway!

Linda Bradshaw leaves her car to the Driver's Safety Class.

Ricardo Moore leaves his false teeth to the nurse in case of an emergency.

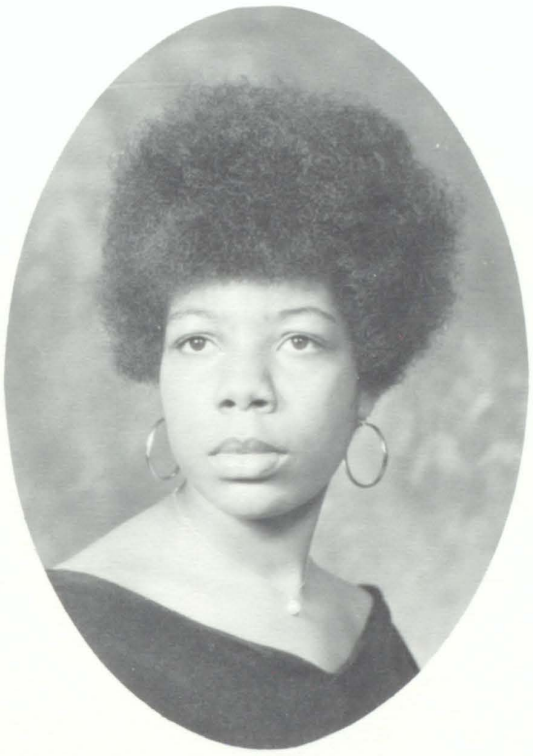

WE leave the students at West Side: THE SECURITY GUARDS!

To the Class of 1971: The ability to profit from all of our errors and to make better use of their own assets.

WE, The Soulful Seniors of Nineteen hundred and seventy-one, leave to West Side High all the happy memories of having had such a "successful and together class" as this one, for no other has exceeded or shall ever exceed The Class of Nineteen Hundred and Seventy-One!!

WEST SIDE ALMA MATER
In morning, night and evening fall
Through all the days of coming years
In time when glowing future calls
In hearts with laughter and with tears
Our love for you will never die, Oh
Alma Mater West Side High
Our love for you will never die, Oh
Alma Mater West Side High
